A Defense of Kentucky Beauties in Paris,

The Morning Telegraph of New York objects to the ungallant criticism of the French press on the beauty of the ty contest winners, and sizes up the Sunday editions in the following:

"The Gaewar of Baroda could not bring himself to admire the beauty of He found them piquant, self-sufficient, full of enterprise, but not nearly so beautiful as the dark-skinned houris of his own jurisdiction.

Rockefeller Escapes.

When, the news was received over "the ticker" in Wall Street that Attorney-General Moody had decided not to press for for any jail penalty against John D. Rockefeller and other Standard Oil officials "the fact was pointed to joyfully," says a New York journal in its market report, "as evidence that the Roosevelt Administration and the trust were now in accord and that occurrences in the near future will demonstrate clearly that the two have reached a thorough understanding. Wall Street regarded the developments in connection with the Standard Oil in-Fourth Monday-Cynthiana, Winches- vestigation in Ohio by the Federal Government as a moral victory for the great trust." It seems impossible to divorce the Republican leaders from Wall Street influences and trust associations and the above Wall Street news indicates that the trusts will supply the sinews of war and that the campaign fund of the Repubican party will be replenished from that source. The dollar subscription dodge of Chairman Sherman is only a fake to fool the voters into believing that trust influences have been banished from the Republican campaign.

Listen to This Republican.

A Boston paper which supported McKinley for the presidency in 1896, says that Roosevelt's most prominent characteristics are-"brag, bluster, conceit, lawlessness, egotism, deceitfulness, impudence, treachery, and heartlessness." The same paper says that "Senator Lodge orders the suppression of every reference to reciprocity with Canada and is obeyed without question, whether in convention or Legislature." It likens Lodge to Quay and Platt, and asks: "Is it not time for selfrespecting Republicans to look elsewhere?"

We agree with this Republican on this question, and will add that the time is ripe for self-respecting Democrats of Kentucky to retire a number of machine Democratics at the November primary.

Attempt to Assassinate Asbury Spicer.

An attempt was made Friday night to assassinate Asbury Spicer as he was enroute to his home from Jackson. One shot took effect in his back, and as Spicer spurred his horse the alleged asasssins followed and fired at him several times, but none of the last volley of shots took effect.

County Judge Takes Novel Position.

Upon certificate of Circuit Clerk Schwartz, of the Campbell Circuit Court, that County Judge Matt Moore refuses to sit in two lunacy cases in that county, the Governor has commissioned Attorney M. R. roasted are of a light yellow color. Others, however, are pronounced bru-There is a reason for this. The great American peanut will remain crisp only a day or two after roasting and in damp weather only a few hours. It absorbs moisture rapidly, so that two days after roasting the finest nuts lose their crispness and are to all intents and purposes as though they had never been cooked. The Italian and Greek peanut men freshen up their stocks by roasting again and reroasting. When the process has been repeated three or four times, though, the peanut begins to ake on a tawny hue, which is considered objectionable by those who have stands in the better paris of town. These much roasted goobers are therefore sold at a discount to Greeks and Italians who have stands near railroad stations and the cheaper resorts, who an roast, reroast and re-reroast them ndefinitely until they are finally sold. -New York Press.

A well known criminal lawyer one day sauntered into a police court just as a case was called. It appeared that the defendant had no attorney, and the judge glanced about the room to see whom he might assign to the case.

"I'll take it, judge," the late comer said, wishing to pass away the time. "By the way, what is the man charged with?" the attorney presently

"He's a camera fiend of the worst sort, Mr. Brown," the judge said, with a slight smile. "I expect to send him to the workhouse for about three months.' "What?" the lawyer shouted indig-

"Well," the judge said mildly, "he loesn't take pictures much-it's the cameras he takes."-New York Times.

A Wonderful Escape. Fieschi tried to assassinate King Louis Philippe of France in July, 1835. The king was riding along the lines of the national guard in the Boulevard du Temple. There came a crash and a rush of bullets. Louis Philippe's arm was grazed, his horse was shot in the neck, Marshal Mortier fell dead and about thirteen other people were killed and thirty wounded. Fieschi had taken the upper floors of a house several weeks before and there rigged up an oaken frame four feet by three feet six inches, supported on four posts of oak and itself supporting twenty-five gun barrels fixed in grooves at various angles so as to command an area of twenty-five feet in length and ten feet in height. When he fired the train of powder that let off his battery the king would have been killed if four barrels had not burst and two missed fire.

Locks were used in the time of the pharaobs. At Karnak the visitor is shown the sculptured representation of a lock which is almost exactly like one kind of lock used in Egypt at the present day. Homer says that Penelope used a brass key to open her wardrobe. He adds that it was very crooked and had an ivory handle. A Greek writer who lived in the last half of the twelfth century explains that such keys were undoubtedly very ancient, although still to be seen in Constantinople and elsewhere. Roman locks, like the Egyptian, required a partial sliding of the key. They were, however, more intri-

Darwin and Books.

Of Darwin it is affirmed that he seemed unaware of the difference in the value of books and would treat a Zaehnsdorf binding with the same scant courtesy that he exercised toward a penny pamphlet. Covers appeared to him a useless weight and decidedly in the way, and he often got rid of them by ripping them off. Sometimes the book was borrowed. It is said that in the end his friends used to give him any book which he wished to borrow, for they knew that, if it were ever returned, its usefulness as a ook would be at an end.

Have a Definite Aim.

No life amounts to much until it has a programme-something definite, comething particular. Nothing else can take the place of it. Education cannot, talent cannot, genius cannot, hard work cannot. Until there is a definite aim the energies will run to waste, the ability be squandered. The faculties leteriorate when working without a lefinite aim.

Sunday was another hot day, and crowded the other hot days of the past week for supremacy. The thermometer registered 88 degrees. Heir to $5,000,000.

A telegram has been received at Lexington from Dallas, Tex., giving the information that the will of the late George M. D. Grisby, who died recently leaving an estate valued at $5,000,-000 to Mrs. J. H. Rieb, wife of a humble mechanic of Lexington, had been probated. Mr. Grisby was a brother of Mrs. Rieb and a native of Kentucky. He went to Texas many years ago and began life as a railroad laborer. His will was written in Lexington about a year ago while Mr. Grisby was on a visit to his sister. The document was prepared by a Lexington attorney and its contents were known to Mrs. Rieb. J. H. Rieb, the husband of the heiress, has lived in Lexington for many years, where he followed the trade of a carpenter, being in no way distinguished from his brethren of that humble craft. The couple have seven children and until recently lived in a cottage at 220 East Sixth street. Since they were informed a few weeks ago of the vast ad dition to their estate the family have moved into a handsome residence on aristocratic Broaday. Mrs. Reib is in Dallas, here she went immediately upon information of her brother's death. From letters received from her by members of the family there is no doubt of the extent of the fortune, which is, in real estate, cash, stocks and other securities.

The Long Man of Wilmington, England. Measures 240 Feet.

About midway between Berwick and Polegate stations, at a point where the side of the hill is very precipitous, those who know exactly the spot where to look will be able to see from the railway carriage windows a sort of rude mitation of the human form outlined in white. The figure, which is between 200 and 300 feet in height, holds a long staff in each hand. This is the "Long Man of Wilmington," once the center of profound veneration and worship, but now merely an object of interest to the curious.

In order to obtain an adequate idea of this great hillside figure, dominating the surrounding country and appearing to watch as guardian over the little village below, it is desirable to approach it afoot, tramping along the winding lanes, as the pilgrims of old must have tramped when they came hither on the occasion of some great religious festival, Seen from afar, the figure does not appear to be of remarkable size, but gradually as one approaches the hill it assumes an imposing and definite shape, "-----

The figure, about 240 feet in height. was merely shaped in the turf so as to allow the chair to appear through. In the course of time these depressions in the surface became almost imperceptible, and to such an extent was the figure neglected that at last it was only possible to make out the form at a distance when the slight hollows were marked by drifted snow or when the oblique rays of the rising or setting sun threw them into a deep shadow. In order to preserve the form of the Long Man, and to render it at the same time easily distinguishable at a distance the outline was marked by a single line of white bricks placed closely together. The effect has been to produce a somewhat startling figure, which is plainly visible in fine weather from a great distance.

There are in different parts of the country other examples of extremely rude and early hillside figures, and, although the very fact of their great antiquity renders it unlikely that historical or documentary evidence will be forthcoming as to their design or precise purpose, it is very satisfactory to find that ar, explanation has been found which will at once account for many of their peculiarities.

The theory is that these are sacrificial figures. We learn from the writings of Caesar that the Gauls (and the Britons were doubtless included) had figures of vast size, the limbs of which, formed of osiers, they filled with living men. The figure was ultimately fired, and the miserable victims perished in the flames.

There is a local saying in Sussex. probably of great antiquity, in which the Long Man is mentioned in reference to the weather. It runs: When Firlie hill and Long Man has a cap

Football In Burma.

Chinion," the Burmese form of football, is the national game. The name means "round basket," writes Mr. Kelly in his book on Burma, and the chinlon is really a ball about six inches in diameter formed of plaited rattans. The game is played by several youths' or men, who stand in a circle a few feet apart. The ball having been thrown into play, the one nearest to whom it falls kicks it up into the air with the instep, knee or side of the foot. The effort is to keep it in the air as long as possible and without losing possession of the ball. A fancy stroke is to turn about face as the ball falls and kick it with the sole of the foot, although the elbows, head or any part of the body except hand and toes may be used. While playing no one leaves his place, but waits until the ball falls within his reach, when he in turn endeavors to retain its possession. It is a very pretty game to watch, and the skill of the performers is often surprising.

The Smallest Screws.

The smallest screws ever made are used in the manufacture of the miniature watches which are sometimes fitted in rings, shirt studs, bracelets, etc. They are the next thing to being invisible to the naked eye, looking like minute grains of sand. With a good glass, however, it may be plainly seen that each is a perfect screw, having a number of threads equal to 1,260 to the inch. These tiny screws are four onethousandths of an inch in diameter and seven one-thousandths of an inch in length. It is estimated that a lady's thimble of average size would hold 100,000 of them. No attempt is ever made to count these "tiny triumphs of mechanical ingenuity" other than to get a basis for estimation. The method usually pursued in determining their number is to carefully count 100 and then place them on a delicate balance, the number of a given amount being determined by the weight of these.

From Salzburg you go to Munich. While traveling through the mountains of Bavaria you drop suddenly from the sublime to the ridiculous by catching a glimpse of a car bearing a label of which this is the translation:

What a "Wed" Means.

Among the Anglo-Saxons the bride that it was perfection. groom gave a pledge or "wed" at the betrothal ceremony. This "wed" included a ring, which was placed on the maiden's right hand, where it remained until at the marriage it was transferred to the lett. Laglishwomen at one time wore the we ding ring on the thumb. Many portraits of ladies in Queen Elizabeth's dar's are so depicted. In the reign of George III. brides usually removed the ring from its proper abiding place to the thumb as soon as the ceremony was over. In Spain third act none who remembers him the gift of a ring is looked upon as a promise of marriage and is considered sufficient proof for a maiden to claim her husband. It is a custom to pass little pieces of bride's cake through the wedding ring, and those to whom these pieces are given place them under their pillows at night to dream of their lovers. These "dreamers," as they are called, should be drawn nine times through the ring. Many brides, however, are so superstitious that neither for that purpose nor at any other time will they take the ring off their finger after it has once been placed there.

OF THE PAST.

Few Famous Actors Have Been Sucmund Kean's Characterization of the Moor-Kean's Death.

One is struck by the number of great actors who have attempted Othello and failed in it. The really successful Othellos are a very small and select company. Eurbage, one assumes, was the original Moor, and was probably as good in it as in any other part he

We get in Mr. Pepys' Diary two quaint references to the play. On Oct. 11, 1659, he tells us he went with Mr. Salisbury and Mr. Creed to see "The Moor of Venice," as it was always called then. It "was well done. Burt acted the Moor. By the same token a yery pretty lady that sat by me called

Another very excellent Iago was George Frederick Cooke. Playing the part one night at York, he was loudly hissed by two or three men in the audience, who cried out, "What a villain!" It was a compliment he much appreciated.

Coming to Edmund Kean, we find this actor playing Othello and Iago on alternate nights. Dr. Doran says of Kean's Othello, "In the fiercer scenes he was unsurpassable, and in the great will. I think, be prepared to allow that he ever had or is likely to have an equal." His Iago was quite original, "a careless, cordial, comfortable villain," as Hazlitt calls him.

Subsequently Kean played Othello to the Iago of Young. It had been arranged that they should alternate the parts, but after the first performance Kean preferred to leave Iago to Young. "I flatter myself," he said to Whitbread, who was then manager of Drury Lane, "he could not act Othello as I. vet what chance should I have in Iago after him with his musical voice?" with his son Charles as Iago. Kean went through the play, "dying as he went," until he came to "Farewell! urbanite-That's just what I want to Othello's occupation gone." Then he Speak to them for me."

Charles Young was excellent as Iago, but when he tried Othello later to the Iago of Macready he failed altogether. Hazlitt said of the performance: Young in Othello was like a great "Culture," said a college president, humming top, and Macready in Iago to. They are all he has to worry like a mischievous boy whipping him." about,

There have been other Otherios since, but few of renown. There was Gustarus Brookes, who appeared in the part SOME OF THE OTHELLOS AND IAGOS at the Olympic in 1848; Charles Kean, at the Princess' in 1853; Salvini, who played it first at the Queen's, in Longacre, in 1875; Fechter played it without success in 1861; Phelps played it at cessful In the Great Tragedy-Ed- the Princess, at Covent Garden, at Sadler's Wells and elsewhere; Sir Henry Irving first played the part in 1876 and subsequently alternated Othello and Iago with Edwin Booth; and, more recently, Forbes Robertson and Hubert Carter.

There have, of course, been burlesque

Othellos, but in three cases at least the burlesque was quite unintentional. Othello was chosen for the first appearance of Samuel Foote at the Haymarket in 1744. The future droll and mimic was short and stout, with a round, flat face, and his acting of the Moor to the lago of Macklin must have been very funny. But a century later, at the same theater, Sothern, of Dundreary

NAME SPELLINGS.

Diversity of Orthography Was Quite

Nowadays if a man whose name was Brown should spell it Broun, Broon, Browen or Brun he would no doubt get into a variety of complicated troubles. Such a diversity of orthography does not seem to have annoved the English poet Shakespeare, however, for his name appears with five different spellings, two of which are in his own handwriting.

In the register in the church at Stratford the name of the greatest English dramatist is written Shakspeare. It appears as Shakspeare in the body of his will, but this same will is indorsed "Mr. Shackspere's Will." The poet himself wrote his name Shakspere and Shakspeare, and now it is spelled Shakespeare.

Sir Walter Raleigh had numerous ways of spelling his name. It appears at different times and places as Rawley, Ralegh, Raleigh, Rawleigh and Raweley.

There is Ben Jonson's signature in which an h appears. Dryden often spelled his name with Samuel Butler, author of "Hudibras," was known to write his name Boteler. Dr. Crovne was so anxious to have his name pronounced correctly that he wrote it six different ways.

The French name Villers during the history of that family was spelled fourteen ways.

The girl's name Maud was one of those that have come down through the ages from the Saxon. Maud was originally Magan, which means to be able.

From the name Hannah the Greeks made Anna and Ananias. Anna, growing in favor, sent off various other offshoots, among which are Annette, Anita. Anne. Nancy, etc.

England by the Crusaders. Later it took me half and hour to walk a mile. and in Germany it became Hans.

The word William comes from ancient Teutonic mythology. It derived its origin from one of three primeval gods-Odin, Wili and Ve.

In like manner we have Margaret from the Persian, meaning the child of light: Barbara from the Greek, meaning strength; Agnes from the Roman, Catharine from the fourth saint and countless others.

Watering Seed Beds.

Amateurs and inexperienced growers of flowers often make the mistake of watering the soil in which seeds are sown immediately after the sowing is moist at the time of sowing no water should be used, as the soil becomes stiff and forms a crust on the surface which prevents the seeds from pushing through. After sowing the seed in any fine sprinkler just enough water to moisten the soil moderately throughout, which will suffice until the soil shows signs of dryness again. It is not necessary to give a little sprinkling every day, as some believe, for such treatment only makes matters worse.

food than he did before? A little reflection will readily explain this apparent mystery. During the process of mastication, deglutition, etc., certain muscles are brought into active play. Now, it is a well established fact in physiology that the exercise of any muscle or set of muscles necessitates a temporary waste of tissue and that a certain amount of carbon is eliminated and passed off during the course of a meal. This loss, however, is trifling as compared with that of respiration and perspiration, both of which functions are increased during the operation of making a meal. The length of time one may take to consume a pound of food makes but little difference in the losses. If it be eaten leisurely, there is but slight increase of respiration or perspiration, whereas if it be burried through both are abnormally accelerated; hence by the time the meal is finished the consumer has lost appreciably in both moisture and carbonic acid. The above explains in a rough but clear manner why it is that a man may eat a pound of food and yet not weigh but from one-third to five-eighths of a pound more than he did before the

WASHINGTON, August 6.- In supporting the movement of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress in its efforts to arouse the people to demand larger rivers and harbors appropriations, Representative John Wesley after me, that all the men in the room Gaines openly criticises the present policy of devoting a great part of the country's income to preparations for war, and so little to the advancement

In making this suggestion, Mr. Gaines, who was extremely active during the past session in behalf of the railroad rate regulation, has evidently in mind a further betterment of the transportation system of the country.

"I think the people of the United States should get behind the Rivers and Harbors Committee, and demand reasonable appropriations and prompt and constant work in improving our ing their women is still prevalent rivers and harbors," added Mr. Gaines.

Moreover, it is further shown that inland waterways of approvedd projects to come before the Rivers and Harbors Committee. whereas the precedent of the last ten years has limited the appropriations for rivers and harbors improvement to something like $19,500,000 a year. There are, furthermore, great projects totalling something like three times a pound more after eating a pound of $300,000,000 clamoring for attention from Congress.

Considering the national importance of some of the proposals and the backing behind them, the Cumberland project in spite of its merits will have little chance of anything like adequate allotment of fund unless the total appropriation far surpasses that heretofore customary. In view of this condition, the Congressional delegations of Tennessee and Kentucky have given to the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, which is endeavoring to awaken the people of all sections to the necessity of an organized and united movement for an annual rivers and Harbors bill of at least $50,000,000, their hearty endorsement.

"In internal taxes," says Mr. Gaines, 'Kentucky and Tennessee have paid millions more than is necessary to complete this work. The actual commerce is there and would be increased ten-fold by this necessary and reasonable improvement."

Without Counting. Archbishop Temple was noted for ity of his power, not in computation or analysis, but in the ability to see a definite number of objects without actually counting them in the ordinary sense, is mentioned in Mr. Sandford's memoirs of the archbishop. Everybody sees three objects, not as one and one and one, but as three. Most people can see four; some see five and even six. Many of those who think they simply see six would discover if they observed the process carefully that they really make a quick count. But Dr. Temple certainly saw higher numbers. #### Derivation of "Whit" Sunday.

A perennial problem is that about the etymology of Whit Sunday, and the supporters of Whitsunday could speak more confidently with their adversaries if they remembered that the Welsh call the anniversary "Sulgwyn," which means "White Sun." This title preserves the Druidic tradition that the sun about this time turns white. No doubt the old British belief arose from the peculiar white glare of the sunlight reflected from the hawthorn blossoms, which must have been far more frappant when south Britain was one vast forest and a thorn fence formed the fortification of every village. The pagan festival of the White Sun possibly developed into the "Whitsun Ales."-Westminster Gazette.

Are You Tired, Nervous and Sleepless?

Nervousness and sleeplessness are usually due to the fact that the nerves are not fed on properly nourishing blood; they are starved nerves. feel clean, strong and strenuous—you are toned up and invigorated, and you are good for a whole lot of physical or mental work. Best of all, the strength and increase in vitality and health are lasting.

The trouble with most tonics and medicines which have a large, booming sale for a short time, is that they are largely composed of alcohol holding the drugs in solution. This alcohol shrinks up the red blood corpuscles, and in the long run greatly injures the system. One may feel exhilarated and better for the time being, yet in the end weakened and with vitality exhibitated and better for the time being, yet in the end weakened and with vitality decreased.
